Henry F. Marx was Director of the Easton Area Public Library from 1901 until 1936. He realized the importance of local history and genealogy and initiated and fostered the collecting of this material.

The collection has been maintained and expanded through the support of successive directors, and is now housed in a climate controlled environment.

THE EASTON FLAG

Tradition holds that the Easton Flag was unfurled on July 8, 1776, when the Declaration of Independence was read in Centre Square. In 1814, the flag was presented to the troop of rifleman the city recruited to defend Washington, D.C. The flag was presented to the Easton Library Company in 1821.
